While today will be the gale day of the great camps of Knights and Lady Maccabees, yesterday was no less a gale day. The fluttering flags and bauners, the numerous Knights and their constantly increasing numbers filled our principal streets full of a moving throng, and store fronts, which had had only their architectural mertis to attract the eye, were rapidly metamorphosal by eye, were rapidly metamorphosel by wreaths and resettes and streamers into palaces of colored beauty. Every train deposited brother Knights and Lady Maccabees, and the hotel lobbies as well as the streets soon filled with mem-bers of the order intent on making that the most memorable of encamp ever held in this state by this a cver held in this state by this rapidly growing order. To crown it all, the day was one of those delightful early autumn days, half cummer, warm enough for comfort and yet tempered by a breeze at once cool and refreshing.

All day long the preparations were in progress, and as evening cettled upon the scene the profuseness of the decorations became bewildering in design and effect, yet complete and harmonious as a whole. At the Morton house the headquarters of the great camp were found. Past great commander, W. S. Linton, Saginaw; great commander, D. D. Aitken, Flint; great fleutenant commander, P. B. At Sweet's hotel the burning of the bees, while pitched on a higher key because of the prescuce of the tireat flive of Lady Maccabees, was none the less earnest or unimated than at The Morton. Indeed, the rustic of their dresses, as it mingled with the measured tread of the officers of the uniform rate, which is also because at this boutets. which is also located at this hostelry, the fluttering of bright ribbons, the flushing of gold bedecked uniforms made a most inspiriting scene. On the register was found the following assess officers of the Great Hive of Lady Mac-
